ABOUT FORT ST. JOHN

Nestled in the picturesque Peace Region of British Columbia, Fort St. John is more than just a northern city; it's a destination with a rich history and a vibrant present. Established during the construction of the Alaska Highway in 1942, the city has grown into a dynamic community that prides itself on keeping a small-town feel with big-city amenities.

History enthusiasts can explore our roots at the North Peace Museum, where the stories of our past come alive. From its humble beginnings, Fort St. John has evolved into a modern city with a commitment to preserving its history while embracing progress.

Beyond the arenas, we invite you to explore the natural beauty surrounding our city. From the Fish Creek Community Forest to the Beatton Provincial Park, our region offers picturesque trails for hiking, providing a perfect opportunity to experience the tranquility of our region. While exploring, don't miss the opportunity to explore and learn about the Tse'K'wa caves - an archaeological site dating over 11,000 years old.

We invite you to discover the unique blend of history, amenities, and genuine hospitality that makes Fort St. John a special destination.

GETTING HERE

As Mile 47 on the Alaska Highway, Fort St. John connects with the rest of British Columbia via Highway 97, which runs south to Dawson Creek and Prince George.
