Keynote Speaker - Aaron Volpatti

Aaron Volpatti is a former NHL player and a pioneer in visualization and performance mindset. He holds a B.Sc degree in Human Biology from Brown University. His hockey career, post-secondary studies, and personal experiences led Aaron to develop his unique practice. He is dedicated to teaching others how to find their true grit through visualization. Aaron has a truly inspiring story of overcoming a tremendous amount of adversity.

After a horrific campfire accident in 2005, Aaron was airlifted to Vancouver General Hospital. He suffered second and third degree burns to 40% of his body and was told his hockey career was over. With no scholarship offer heading into his last year of Junior hockey and a recovery that would last years, Aaron faced insurmountable odds to obtain a scholarship to Brown University, let alone a career in the NHL. After several surgeries and a gruesome recovery, he returned to the ice just 4 months after his injury and signed with Vancouver Canucks 5 years later in 2010.

Today, Aaron is focused on inspiring people around the world through his coaching and speaking engagements. His journeys and successes wouldn't have been possible without the extremely powerful visualization practice he developed. He wrote his own story, and visualized it every single day. This unique practice that Aaron teaches his clients has taken him to the highest level in professional sports and it has also saved his life. Simply put, he owes his life to this practice and it's why he is so passionate about teaching it.

OUR FIRST NATIONS HISTORY:

First Nations History of Maple Ridge & Pitt Meadows (Summary)

The lands now known as Maple Ridge and Pitt Meadows lie within the traditional, ancestral, and unceded territory of the Katzie First Nation, part of the Coast Salish peoples. These lands have been inhabited for thousands of years—long before European contact.

Katzie First Nation

The Katzie people lived throughout the lower Fraser River, Pitt River, and surrounding marshlands, forests, and mountains. Their name comes from the Halkomelem word q'íc'əy', meaning "land of moss." The environment supported a rich and sustainable way of life based on fishing, hunting, gathering, and trade.

Today, the Katzie First Nation remains an active and vital community, working to preserve language, culture, and traditions while participating in environmental stewardship and local governance. Maple Ridge and Pitt Meadows continue to acknowledge that they are on unceded Katzie territory, recognizing the ongoing presence and rights of the First Nations people of this land.
